

Mencken: text comparison

New Sun Text 8,5–9,5

JERUSALEM – Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas, who had clashed with Yasser Arafat by opposing attacks against Israel, declared victory last night in the election for president of the Palestinian Authority.

His substantial margin over six other candidates, as projected by three exit polls, could give him the mandate he sought for reforming a notoriously corrupt Palestinian government and restarting peace negotiations with Israel.

The 265 exit polls showed Abbas, a former prime minister, winning about percent of the vote. His nearest competitor, physician Mustafa Barghouti, was projected to get about percent. The authority's Central Election Commission is expected to release the official tally today.

Before

Mencken Text B 9–9,5

JERUSALEM – Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas, who had clashed with Yasser Arafat by opposing attacks against Israel, declared victory last night in the election for president of the Palestinian Authority.

His substantial margin over six other candidates, as projected by three exit polls, could give him the mandate he sought for reforming a notoriously corrupt Palestinian government and restarting peace negotiations with Israel.

The 265 exit polls showed Abbas, a former prime minister, winning about percent of the vote. His nearest competitor, physician Mustafa Barghouti, was projected to get about percent. The authority's Central Election Commission is expected to release the official tally today.

Today

Nimrod 8,5–9,5

JERUSALEM – Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas, who had clashed with Yasser Arafat by opposing attacks against Israel, declared victory last night in the election for president of the Palestinian Authority.

His substantial margin over six other candidates, as projected by three exit polls, could give him the mandate he sought for reforming a notoriously corrupt Palestinian government and restarting peace negotiations with Israel.

The 265 exit polls showed Abbas, a former prime minister, winning about percent of the vote. His nearest competitor, physician Mustafa Barghouti, was projected to get about percent. The authority's Central Election Commission is expected to release the official tally today.